

72 Dragons Health

Neve Campbell Returns to Her Final Girl Roots in Red Cross' Blood Drive Horror Campaign

Neve Campbell's appearance in the American Red Cross' blood donation campaign follows her "very tough decision" to not return for the next Scream 6 film.

The horror genre isn't nearly finished with Neve Campbell.

The 48-year-old Scream actress channeled her inner Sidney Prescott when she participated in a great blood donation drive for the American Red Cross that included hilarious horror movie references.

"Why am I avoiding the murderer rather than reaching for something substantial and cutting edge? Dumb," Before moving in the opposite direction, Campbell says.

Another image shows her searching through kitchen drawers for a weapon. "So stupid. Many people require blood, whether they are battling cancer, giving birth, or perhaps risking being stabbed" Adds she.

Courteney Cox, a fellow legacy actor who has already confirmed her involvement with the series, was recently photographed on the Montreal set of the film. The Just for Variety podcast received an update from her in December after she received the screenplay.

Luke Lewis, who at the time oversaw Twain's record company, remarked that it was difficult to have his client go through these health problems following so many years of success. He said, "That was painful to watch. "I've never felt so much for somebody. She visited specialists all around the world.

Eventually, the "You Win My Love" singer received the assistance she required, but she previously admitted that it took physicians years to determine exactly how the sickness had impacted her voice.

The singer also mentioned in one of her interviews "I would say it was probably a good seven years before a doctor was able to find out that it was nerve damage to my vocal cords directly caused by Lyme disease,"

To stabilize her vocal cords the singer went through an open-throat surgery, although she was able to sing after the surgery she could feel a change in the way her voice sounded than before.

She has to put more effort into speaking than it is for her to sing. She finds it more difficult to speak than singing, she explains.

